9 Enclosed for the Bureau is one xerox copy of Chapter
 #VI from the novel the "Turner Diaries."

10 The purpose of this communication is to draw attention
 11 to specific aspects of the novel entitled the "Turner Diaries" by 12 ANDREW MCDONALD, true name WILLIAM L. PIERCE, who is active within 13 the White Supremacy Movement. This novel was published in May, 1978. FBIHQ is specifically reminded that the "Turner Diaries" is 14 considered a significant work and foundation document closely 15 embraced by the leadership as well as rank and file members of the 16 Right-wing, White Supremist Movement, also known as the "Christian Identity Movement." The significance of this novel at this particular time, is the projected date(s) of key "actions" taken by fictional members of a White Supremist group in the book, said group ultimately calling itself, "The Order."

17 On September 16, 1991, the fictional initiation of a 18 white revolution begins. The book begins in Chapter One with the "September 16, 1991. Today it finally began. After all these years of talking - and nothing but talking - we have finally taken our first action. We are at war with the system (U.S. Government), and it is no longer a war of words.

This chapter goes on to describe a series of outright violence initiated by the White Supremist Movement against the U.S. Government in general and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) specifically.

In a subsequent chapter following a continuing series of escalating acts of violence, the "Turner Diaries" specifically describes a carefully orchestrated act of terrorism targeting FBI Headquarters, in Washington, D.C. Chapter VI begins with this account:

"October 13, 1991. At 9:15 (am) yesterday (10/12/91) morning our bomb went off in the FBI's national headquarters building. Our worries about the relatively small size of the bomb were unfounded; the damage is immense."

The chapter (xeroxed in its entirety and enclosed for reference) continues to describe in some detail the manufacturing, assembly of an Improvised Explosive Device (IED) utilizing a combination of heating oil mixed with ammonium nitrate fertilizer. This IED is coupled with two-and-a-half tons of explosives, all loaded into a "delivery truck" stolen in the Washington, D.C. area. The book goes on to describe how the truck is then driven into the basement of the FBI building utilizing the "10th Street freight door."

The results of the explosion are described in part as follows,

"The scene in the courtyard was one of utter destruction. The whole Pennsylvania Avenue wing of the FBIHQ building...had collapsed, partly into the courtyard in the center of the building and partly into Pennsylvania Avenue. A huge, gaping hole yawned in the courtyard pavement just beyond the rubble of collapsed masonry, and it was from this hole that most of the column of black smoke was ascending."

The cited dates (September 16, 1991 and October 12, 1991) of violence and terrorism are brought to the attention of FBIHQ solely in the context of informed preparedness. It is not the intent of the San Antonio Division to foster paranoia with regard to this novel, the White Supremist Movement or any aspect thereof, but moreover to specifically highlight the fictional events portrayed and point out the significance of this novel as a foundation document within the "movement."

Although the San Antonio Division recognizes that this novel is similar in nature to the futuristic "1984" by Orwell, we are equally aware, as is FBIHQ of the prior manifestations from the "Turner Diaries" of aspects such as "the Order" and acts of violence such as assassinations (ALAN BERG) and armored car robberies by "the Order." These exact actions came from the fictional accounts of the "Turner Diaries." It is the sole purpose of this communication to point out the significance of the near future (September/October, 1991) as portrayed in the "Turner Diaries." Any action or precautions which may or may not be undertaken are left to the discretion of FBIHQ.
